Adoption application

I understand that this is only an application and that the filling out of this form implies no guarantee of approval to adopt. Pony Up Rescue for Equines reserves the right to deny any application for any reason.

I understand that an adopting party enters into a contractual agreement with Pony Up Rescue for Equines to provide a home for the equine for as long as Pony Up Rescue for Equines feels that the adoption is in the best interest of the equine. I further understand that adopted equines may not be sold or traded or given away or placed into another person's care without the expressed written consent of Pony Up Rescue for Equines.

I understand that if I am no longer able to care for the equine, the equine must be returned to Pony Up Rescue for Equines and transportation must be arranged.

Please be advised that each equine is adopted with an adoption donation. The donation amount depends on several factors including age, ability, condition, level of training and care requirements.

A signed adoption agreement and donation must be received in order for this agreement to be finalized and the ownership of the equine transferred to the adopting party.

Before you submit this application, have you thought about the expense of owning a horse?

Below are some examples of the costs of horse ownership. We have found that a typical equine costs about 4,000 a year to support adequately.

Hooves shod or trimmed...70-150 dollars

Grain/hay.....250-300 a month

Wormer every six weeks....4-12 dollars

Annual vet visits.....300+

Annual teeth floating..... 125 -300 dollars

At least 1-2 hours each day to feed, clean stalls and grooming.

Misc expenses such as fly spray, shampoo, grooming items

Funds for any emergency vetting such as colic hospitalization or leg injuries or flu from 1000-3000 dollars.

If a horse becomes ill and requires medical attention, this can range from a simple vet call and exam for 150 dollars or could reach into the thousands for something such as colic surgery.

Our goal is to adopt horses to lifelong homes where their emotional, physical, social and medical needs are met.

What will you do if your horse becomes unsound or unfit for riding? _____
